This seminar is designed to help parents and professionals design educational programs that enable students with disabilities to be successfully educated in their neighborhood high schools. The session will include resources and hands-on activities to enable participants to practice techniques and strategies for providing access to the general education curriculum for students of all abilities.

About the speaker: Kathleen Whitbread, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor and Associate Director of the UConn Center on Disabilities, where she directs several statewide projects focused on access to the general education curriculum for students with significant disabilities. Dr. Whitbread has more than 25 years of experience providing training and technical assistance to school districts and families in inclusive education, positive behavior supports, and family-school partnerships. Dr. Whitbread is the editor of The Inclusion Notebook, an award winning, internationally distributed publication of best practices in inclusive education. She has published articles on her research in Teaching Exceptional Children, The New England Reading Association Journal, and Topics in Early Childhood Special Education and is co-author, with Anne Eason, of the book IEP and Inclusion Tips for Parents and Teachers.
